

“What is a Wildlife Rehabilitator?”

A Licensed wild animal rehabilitator is a volunteer steward of native Indiana wildlife. To be permitted by the Department of Natural Resources, you must meet strict educational & moral practice requirements. In the state of Indiana, it is illegal to possess orphaned wild babies, or native wildlife of any kind, unless you are permitted by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). Wild animal rehabilitators are dedicated to saving lives, not deciding what forms of lives are worth saving. Wild animal rehabilitators understand wildlife is not ours to capture, experiment on, keep for pet/entertainment purposes or destroy, they are surrogate parents, who do not take, but give back life.....

“Wildlife rehabilitators have the most rewarding & satisfying job you could have, and not get paid for!!!”
